2019 Year Review

Every year, New Hampshire Animal Rights League advocates for animals in many different ways. Below is an outline of the work we did in 2019. Thank you to everyone who joined and supported our efforts.

- WRATH (Worldwide Rally Against Trophy Hunting) took place in Concord on January 12th in windy, 20-degree weather. About 14 people braved the frigid wind and held signs at the corner of Loudon Road and Hazen Drive. NHARL was the local rally leader, and WRATH events were simultaneously held throughout the world. The nonprofit animal advocacy organization Compassion Works International produces the Worldwide Rally to raise awareness about the ego-driven and senseless murder of countless wild animals by members of Safari Club International and other "trophy hunters." Cecil, the lion, we will never forget you!

- Many NHARL members attended the hearing in late January to introduce HB442, the Coyote Protection Bill. They were very active contacting legislators and advocating for this legislation. Unfortunately, the bill was defeated in March.

- PROTEST PUPPY MILLS was hosted by NHARL and Voice for Animals Maine and New Hampshire on March 22nd outside Little Shop of Pets in Portsmouth. This event was repeated monthly beginning in May through year’s end.

- The 7th ANNUAL NH VEGFEST on April 20 was sponsored by NHARL and several other groups at Manchester Community College.

- A protest against trapping was held the same day as NH VegFest at Discover Wild NH Day in Concord, hosted by NHARL.

- A week later, PROTEST MISS NH’s ACCEPTANCE OF A FUR COAT was hosted by NHCART, NHARL, Twin States Animal Liberation Outreach, and Anonymous for the Voiceless outside the Stockbridge Theatre in Derry.

- NHARL tabled and unfurled its new “Go Vegan!” tablecloth on May 4th at the Souhegan Sustainability Fair in Wilton.

- The UNH Animal Welfare Alliance Pet Fair also occurred on May 4th and NHARL tabled and gave out vegan food samples from Susty’s Restaurant. Proceeds from the event went to SAFER CATS in Hampton.

- On May 14th, NHARL voted to add its name to the letter to congress urging current animal welfare laws be enforced. The letter was sponsored by the Missouri Alliance for Animal Legislation.

- Mountain Vegfest was held on July 13th in Lebanon and NHARL was there tabling.

- Liberation 4 Lolita in Portsmouth took place in late July and included a march through downtown and speeches in Market Square while similar events were held worldwide.

- In early August, NHARL’s annual vegan summer outing was well-attended, as people from places near and far converged on Four-Tree Island in Portsmouth.

- Toward the end of August, NHARL members helped quash the planned New Castle Deer Kill.

- The NH Animal Protection Caucus held its inaugural meeting on August 27th, with NHARL members attending.

- Walk with the Animals was held on September 22nd. NHARL tabled.

- Emily Murphy gave her vegan presentation to the students at UNH in Durham on November 5th.

- A Living Shores Aquarium Protest was held November 9th in Glen, hosted by NHARL and Until Lolita is Home.

- NHARL’s annual Gentle Vegan Thanksgiving and meeting took place on November 23rd at the Newmarket Polish American Club. This event featured guest speaker Patrice Jones, co-founder of VINE Sanctuary in Vermont. Patrice gave an excellent presentation titled “If Turkeys were our Tour Guides.”

- Fur Free Friday is a worldwide event that takes place on the Friday after Thanksgiving. This year’s demonstration took place outside of the Miss New Hampshire office in Derry New Hampshire. The event combined anti-trapping with exposing Miss New Hampshire’s acceptance of a fur coat by NH trappers every year.
NHARL Farmed Animal Committee

New for 2020, NHARL has formed a Farmed Animal Committee. Because animals raised for meat, eggs, and milk represent more than 95% of the animals killed by humans in this country, farm animals desperately need our advocacy. Actions the committee has discussed so far include stepping up our work to promote veganism and seeking better protections for farmed animals through legislation and political action. COVID-19 Through the Lens of an Animal Rights Advocate

As animal rights advocates, our experience of the COVID-19 pandemic likely differs from that of the average person. Along with feeling all the usual emotions and fears, we may also be deeply saddened to learn of yet another form of animal cruelty brought to light by the pandemic.

What took place in the market in Wuhan, China where the virus is believed to have first been transmitted from an animal to a human was barbaric. And yet we know that our own culture has sanctioned forms of barbarism as well. The factory-farmed chickens shackled upside down and slaughtered in view of their flock mates are arguably no better treated than the victims of China’s wild meat markets.

Adding to our anguish, viral outbreaks such as COVID-19 are often accompanied by the mass killing of animals believed to be carrying the virus. During the SARS outbreak in 2009, Chinese authorities ordered the destruction of 10,000 civets, even without proof that these animals were the direct source of the virus. Their deaths were not quick and painless.

In the United States, the mass killing of diseased animals on farms is a routine occurrence. Mainstream reporting of such events invariably focuses on the hardship to the farmer, never mentioning the suffering of sick and dying animals.

We have a lot in common with pigs, and they likely experience symptoms of flu much the same way we do. In “Esther the Wonder Pig,” the story of a rescued factory farm pig, Esther’s guardian describes a time when Esther wasn’t feeling well and was later diagnosed with the flu. Esther was listless, picked at her food, and walked slowly hanging her head low, he explained, adding, “She looked exactly how I feel when I’m sick.”

Those of us who care about animal suffering hope that the gravity of the COVID-19 pandemic makes it the event that brings mainstream awareness to the myriad threats connected with eating animals — from bacterial infections caused by inadvertently ingesting their feces, to novel viruses that pass from their slaughtered bodies to ours, to diseases that arise from the dangerous co-mingling of farmed and wild animals as we clear forested land for livestock, to the lifestyle diseases linked to eating animal flesh and secretions, and, finally, to the rise of antibiotic-resistant infections driven by excessive use of antibiotics on farms.

It’s an opportune time to help your not-yet-vegan friends and family members make the connection. 12. Remove and let completely cool before transferring to an air-tight container.
13. Give to your pup as desired!

Letter to the Editor—Valley News, by Julie Püttgen

Over the months, I’ve noticed a pattern rattling around the edges of your news coverage, whenever animals are mentioned. Sometimes, even if context makes the animal’s gender obvious, the creature is referred to as "it." This happens often with wild animals, but sometimes also with companion and farmed animals. Elsewhere, typically when an individual animal has tugged on human heart-strings, "he" or "she" is used. The deer trapped on the ice in Claremont graduated from "it" to "she" overnight in the Valley News, presumably because enough humans became concerned about her plight. I recommend that the Valley News resolve this inconsistency by committing to using more respectful "he/his" or "she/hers" pronouns in all animal-related stories. And when the animal’s gender is not known, voila! A perfect opportunity to practice using the singular "they."

Language and ethics are intertwined. This seemingly small change can help open the door to common sense compassion in all our communities.

Quote
“In fact, if one person is unkind to an animal it is considered to be cruelty, but when a lot of people are unkind to animals, especially in the name of commerce, the cruelty is condoned and, once large sums of money are at stake, will be defended to the last by otherwise intelligent people.”
