

LET GO and LET NATURE BE

New Hampshire is losing species at an alarming rate. Safeguarding habitats is no longer enough — we must enable nature to expand.

LET GO and LET NATURE BE

The world is losing nature at a remarkable pace, and New Hampshire is no exception. The crisis spares no creature – mammals, fish, birds, amphibians, reptiles, and even the tiniest invertebrates are disappearing. The culprits? Rampant development, widespread pesticide use, and climate change.

9 ways to promote wildlife:

- Don't mow
- Leave leaves
- Keep your trees!
- Plant for pollinators
- Landscape for wildlife
- Use non-lethal methods to deter unwelcome wildlife
- Lights off at night
- Retire your bug zapper
- Build homes for animals

Simply by letting land be, allowing nature to reclaim its space, you can help imperiled species rebound. So how much of your land are you prepared to dedicate to the wild?
